

A Moment on Hunger for Kiwanis Meetings

Until recently, I never thought I knew anybody who had ever really been hungry - I mean hungry enough that their nutrition wasn't good enough to meet their needs.

Then I reunited with a friend from my high school days and during the reminiscing, he started telling me about not getting enough to eat during those school days. "There were 7 of us at the table, but only enough food for 3 or 4," he said. "There was hardly ever enough."

He went on to say that he became known as the human garbage disposal at school lunchtime because he would eat all that the other kids would leave on their plates - the green beans, apples and corn. "It filled in for what I didn't get at home," he explained.

I do know people who are hungry.
