

Kiwanis Club of Madison West

KIWANOGRAM

Guests: None.

Program: Dolly Ledin, Administrator Program Manager at UW-Madison described the Adult Role Model in Science (ARMS) program, which prepares adults with scientific expertise to work with children by cultivating their curiosity and excitement about science, help them think like scientists and nurture their desire to learn.

The ARMS volunteers connect with children through 1. Afterschool Science Clubs. 2. Middle School Science Symposia, 3. Family Science Events and 4. Classroom Volunteers. Training is provided to insure successful experience working with children, For volunteers looking for college credit, a two-credit, year long course titled is 'Engage Children in Science'. On June 16, 9:00 to 11:30 am a volunteer training will be provided. If interested register with Dolly daledin@wisc.edu.

This program is a part of WISCIENCE (Wisconsin Institute for Science Education and Community Engagement) at UW-Madison. More information is available at the ARMS web site: biologywisc.edu/ARS.htm. Ken Groehler has been a volunteer in this program. Downtown Kiwanians, Lyle Hill, is the founder of ARMS.
