Governor's Column

Dear Kiwanians,

During my remarks at the convention back in Asheville, you will recall that I promised to give you instructions on how you could help meet the District Goals and return our district membership back to levels we had ten years ago. I gave more details on Goal One in the last Kiwanian. Here are more details on Goal Two.

District Goal Two-Increase membership in existing clubs by promoting the establishment of Club Satellites where such satellites have been determined to be the best approach to growing a club.

Starting a club satellite may be the easiest approach to growing a club. First, it appeals to a large group of mainly youth who have a desire to "serve" the children and/or their community without meeting and eating. They may not have time to socialize or the money to purchase a meal at each and every meeting.

Second, for some employees, and especially teachers, a lunch meeting is not conducive due to time constraints. Other noted professions that may fall into the category of time constraints include firemen and policemen. Don't forget about parents who must take their children to soccer, baseball and football that are probably early evening events. So we see that there are several conflicts that restrict membership that otherwise are a source for member prospects.

How can Club Satellites remove some of these obstacles? Kiwanis International created the Club Satellite membership option with these very obstacles in mind. Club Satellite rules are very flexible and can offer all the aforementioned conflicts an alternative to Kiwanis membership.

Should a club create a Club Satellite and it grows to charter strength and desire to be chartered, the host club will not suffer a penalty for the loss of membership, but gets credit for starting a new club. Then start another one.

Spartanburg Schools take part in math revolution

By Lee G. Healy

The idea that sparked a billboard campaign and county-wide student recognition program came to Spartanburg resident Ed Hall in 2005 while tutoring students at Roebuck Elementary School.

Hall started as a grandparent reader, but that job soon evolved into volunteering in his granddaughter's third-grade class, helping students with their multiplication tables — a skill all third-graders are expected to know before advancing to the next grade. Some students, Hall said, lacked the mathematical foundations necessary to advance academically.

Hall began to build that foundation, offering students encouragement and rewards.

"I saw a need when I started working with kids in the fourth and fifth grade that were creating problems in the class for the teachers who were having to go back and teach division and multiplication," said Hall, 73, a retired Army general and former assistant director of maintenance and operations at Wofford College. "It took time away from the other students who did know."

With the support of teachers, administrators, business professionals and a local civic club, Hall developed a Math Revolution curriculum and began offering students medallions for multiplication excellence. Students must complete a 9-minute timed test on multiplication facts. Boys and girls who earn a perfect score are recognized in front of their peers and receive a medal hanging from a red, white and blue ribbon for "excellence in math."

The program was tested in all District 6 third-grade classes last year, with 68 percent of students passing the test. Math Revolution earned the support of all seven Spartanburg superintendents for county-wide implementation this year. Hall's goal is to reach all of the approximately 3,350 third-graders in Spartanburg County schools.

"I think it's a great example of someone wanting to give back to their community and to the students that has a passion and drive that's really been almost contagious when it comes to working with students in this area," said District 6 Superintendent Darryl Owings. "He was so determined to make this happen. We were just willing participants and the beneficiaries of Gen. Hall's hard work."

As he hangs congratulatory medals around third-graders' necks, Hall likens the multiplication facts to the concrete an architect needs to build a proper foundation for a house. Lacking that knowledge, he said, is like building on sand. He asks each student what he or she wants to be one day and provides gentle words of encouragement, telling them that math is a key to success.

"I'm real pleased with it," Hall said of Math Revolution's progression through the local schools. "I've noticed the teachers and liaisons are getting real excited about it. The students are real excited. We're making some headway, and I think the program is going to make a real impact."

To fund the program as it grew, Hall enlisted help from the Spartanburg Kiwanis Club (where he's a member) and local McDonald's owner Phyllis Lewis. The Kiwanis Club reallocated a portion of funds normally earmarked for scholarships to support Math Revolution, which Hall pointed out doesn't help just one student further his or her education, but thousands. This year, Lewis, who has supported the program since the beginning with McDonald's coupons and prizes, paid for the design of 15 Math Revolution billboards located across the county.

Both the Kiwanis Club of Spartanburg and McDonald's are on the medals as sponsors. Hall sees the potential to take the program nationwide, with the continued support of both organizations.

"I know how important it is for children to be able to perform on class level when they arrive in a class," said Lewis, a former elementary school teacher and current owner of five McDonald's restaurants in Spartanburg County. "Children need to be recognized. People need to feel when they have succeeded in something, that

Black Friday Was Not All Bad

Columbia Northeast Kiwanis Club member, Pat Bero, battled the throngs of shoppers in the early hours of Black Friday. Unlike most of the bargain hunters Pat was not shopping for himself or his family. He was working hard to stretch the club members' dollars, which he more than matched, and buy as many large gifts as possible for the children of needy families. For the second consecutive year, the Columbia Northeast club has partnered with the local CBS affiliate to help Stuff-a-Bus. Organizations and community minded citizens volunteer their time and make donations the first two weekends of December to help create a joyous holiday for local families. In addition to clothes and toys, monies and food are also collected. All of the bicycles pictured are not only from Pat's shopping spree, he assembled each one as well. The photo was taken in front of the Carolina Children's Garden on the 600 acre Columbia campus of the Clemson Sandhill Research and Education Center. The garden is a project supported by the Columbia Northeast club, along

Local club makes a difference with change

MATTHEWS, NC – Members of the Kiwanis Club of Matthews raised over $500 in loose change for The Eliminate Project. Led by Andy Button, the club has pledged to raise $2,000 in loose change over a four-year period. For fiscal year 2010-2011, the club was able to present a $500 check to Elizabeth Tezza, Carolinas District Coordinator for The Eliminate Project.

they are going to be recognized. It's a small token, but it has incited a lot of excitement among the students."

Sixteen third-graders at Pacolet Elementary School received medals this past Monday morning. Hall was there to personally put the tokens around students' necks. It's the first group of students at the school to receive the medallions, but the school's goal is for all students to earn them by the end of the school year.

"The medals have really caused them to be more enthusiastic about (math)," said Allison Berry, assistant administrator and instructional coach at Pacolet. "It presents more of a challenge for them instead of it just being an assignment."

Madison Cash, 8, smiled when her name was called to receive a Math Revolution medal. She knew the significance of the award.

"I was happy because I worked really hard for it," Madison said, adding that it's important to learn math "so we can be whatever we want to be when we grow up."

So close in Sierra Leone

A delegation from the Kiwanis family visited Sierra Leone in late November to witness a monumental feat: the final round of three tetanus toxoid campaigns that hopefully will lead to the confirmation of tetanus elimination in Sierra Leone.

Candidate for Governor-Elect

Gate City Kiwanis Club Endorses Candidacy of William J. Clingenpeel for Governor-Elect

By Charles K Meyer

As President of the Gate City Kiwanis Club, I am honored to inform the Carolinas District membership that Gate City Kiwanis Club proudly endorses and announces the candidacy of William (Bill) J. Clingenpeel for the office of Governor-Elect.

Over the last twenty-one years, Bill has served the Carolinas District in many capacities. After Bill's year as Lt. Governor (1989-90), Governor-Elect Phil Harris asked him to be his District Interclub Chair. Henry Fishburne asked Bill to be his KIF Chair. As KIF Chair during most of the 1990's, Bill became known throughout our District. Over the years,

Bill has served as KIF chair for eight and a half Governors. In 1991 David Burnette asked him to become a Kiwanis Certified Trainer and sent him off to Indianapolis for three days of training. Bill has been active in that capacity for the last twenty years. In 1992 David asked Bill to join him on the Carolinas District Foundation Executive Committee. He served on the District Foundation Executive Committee for nine years, six of those years as an officer, three as Vice President and three as President of the Foundation. Eight years ago, Governor-Elect Designate Bev Martin asked Bill to serve as District Treasurer and today he still has that position.

In Bill's early years in Kiwanis, he served in the Indiana and Florida Districts. However, his main involvement was at the Club leadership level.

Bill has enjoyed his Kiwanis journey in the Carolinas District, and he has met and worked with many wonderful Kiwanians. Bill is now retired and has accepted the opportunity to be a candidate for Governor-Elect at our next District Convention in August.

As President of the Gate City Kiwanis Club, I am asking for your support and endorsement of William (Bill) J. Clingenpeel for Governor-Elect of the Carolinas District.
