Member Concerns

Larry Young updated member concerns.

Dennis Daugherty has missed from our last couple meetings recovering from the flu. He is doing better and we hope to see him at Bingo on Monday.

Rose Fortune's husband, Randy has also been battling the flu and spent a couple nights in the hospital.

Good to see Rich Hicks back with us today after suffering a mild stroke last week.

Rich Hicks provided an update on Bob Evans who had surgery on his aorta a week ago. He is doing better but is still fatigued. He hopes to join us at next week's meeting.

Fred Fletemeyer lost his father last evening. Fred said he was proud of his father and his service during WWII. Fred's father was the last surviving officer from a battalion stationed on Saipan.

Warren Gerig said Ed Krekorian is moving permanently to assisted living at Morning Star. Ed's wife, Patricia, has moved out of ICU to a rehab center on Centennial. Ed wanted to let us know he is doing fine but is very slow on his walker. He wants to thank us for all the support we have given him, and he misses the meetings.

Our meeting on Saturday was the last chance to sign up for the Superbowl boards and several people did. Thanks to big Ole and Ragnar for their encouragement this season. John Spidell stood up to the plate, sold a couple shares of his McDonalds stock, and bought the remaining squares to fill in the boards. Below are the numbers assigned to the squares by a computer generated random number selection operated by Russ Broshous. Follow your numbers during the game and good luck!

Tuskegee Airmen

Col. Mark Dickerson

Scribe: RF Smith

Today's guest speaker was Colonel Mark C. Dickerson, USAF, retired (bio below). Mark started his presentation with a clip from the movie "Red Tails," a movie about the 332nd Fighter Group, the famed Tuskegee Airman fighter unit of WWII. Following the movie clip, Mark's presentation covered some of the other details about the Tuskegee Airmen.

Mark started with some unit history. WWII pilot shortages and racial prejudices came to a crossroads in 1939. The "Tuskegee Experiment" (as it was known) was to determine if black pilots had the courage, character and intelligence to be successful military pilots. The unit was championed by 1st Lady Eleanor Roosevelt after she inspected the unit in 1941. Eventually, over 14,000 African Americans would serve in the unit, 1,000 of whom were pilots. Of these 1,000, 19 called Colorado their home-in 2011, there were 11 of these left and today that number is three. "Wings for This Man" was a WWII public relations video narrated by Ronald Reagan: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5rAlVbFXdbk>.

When a former member of the unit was asked why they were so successful, the reply was that they were all "Type A" people who didn't take no for an answer-the type of folks who lived with the attitude "don't tell me what I can't do"-those spurred to greater performance by the road blocks, adversity, and actual sabotage they faced during their training. Their white commander was thought of as firm and tough, but fair. The unit had very high training standards. It was said of the 332nd that "we washed out better pilots than [other units] graduated.

Initially, the unit was deployed to Northern Africa where they were tasked mainly to strafe ground targets. Their existence and performance were not widely known, kept secret by the military. Group Commander, Colonel Bennie O. Davis (later a retired 4star), pushed successfully for the unit to be sent to Europe and assigned new aircraft.

German tactics of the day were to send a small force to draw the fighter escort away from the bombers, whereupon the larger German fighter force would attack and decimate the unprotected bombers. The new tactic, assigned to the "Red Tails", was to remain with the bombers throughout their route to and from the target. The 332nd units became famous for their steadfast protection of the bombers.

Their commander, Col Benjamin Davis, made it clear that any pilot abandoning their bombers to chase fighter kills would be removed from the unit and subjected to court-martial.

While legend that the 332nd never lost a bomber is not true, their losses were far less than other fighter units and bomber units were relieved when the red tailed aircraft showed up at rendezvous to escort them. The practice of colored tail flashes to identify different units was common but the 332nd painted their whole tails because they wanted there to be no doubt who was flying the aircraft. Mark told us that they were red only because that was the color of paint available.

While the fighter units of the 332nd were in the war, the African American bomber units of the 477th Bombardment Group, flying B-25 Mitchell bombers, remained at home in training. There they were subjected to overt discrimination when the base commanders established local rules that gave transient aircraft priority for maintenance and required students (black officers) to use a different club on base than the instructors (white officers). Black officers (and others) felt the local regulation was in conflict with Army Regulation 210-10 which forbade segregation of base facilities. The black officers attempted to enter the "white" club in defiance of the base regulation. Mark reminded us that the officers could have been sentenced to death under the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) for defying a lawful order in time of war. The resulting confrontation, known as the Freeman Field Mutiny, resulted in letters of reprimand and more severe penalties for many black officers. These disciplinary actions were eventually overturned by President G. W. Bush in 2007 when the unit was collectively awarded the Congressional Gold Medal, an award which is on display in the Smithsonian.

When the Red Tails sailed home from the war, part of the victorious American forces, there were still signs at the bottom of the gangplanks directing whites one way and negroes another. Since this time however, the Tuskegee Airmen have been honored in a number of different ways. Here in Colorado, I-70 from the Utah border to the Kansas border is official named part of the "Tuskegee Airmen Memorial Trail." Other states, including Illinois and Kentucky have named sections of the interstate system in the same way. The Colorado legislature has designated the 4th Thursday in March as "Tuskegee Airmen Commemoration Day" and the first observance of this holiday will be in 2018. The signed resolution (17-020) identifies the choice of March as having special significance since that was the month when the first of the Tuskegee Airmen received their silver wings.

Finally, Colonel Dickerson told as a little about the unit of which he is currently president, the Hubert L, "Hooks" Jones chapter, one of some 50 chapters of the Tuskegee Airmen. Their goals include giving youth a historical awareness, encouraging them never to accept no for an answer, and enabling them with scholarships. The Mile High Flight Program introduces 40-50 cadets per year to aviation, eventually culling the entry class down to 2-3 who have proven themselves in a very competitive classroom and practical training process that leads to initial solo. The chapter recently established an endowment with Denver University and the University of Colorado at Boulder which will ensure an annual Tuskegee Airmen scholarship can be awarded in perpetuity. Colonel Dickerson's presentation was very well received and informational.

Colonel Dickerson's Biography

Colonel Dickerson retired from the Air Force with over 4500 hours of flying time in over 40 different types of aircraft. A graduate and former Deputy Commandant of the USAF Test Pilot School, Mark is also an Associate Fellow and former Board Member with the Society of Experimental Test Pilots. After leaving the Air Force, he spent seven years with NASA and is the only African American ever to become a Research Pilot at NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center. He is a CERT volunteer with El Paso County.

Mark holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Engineering Physics from Cornell University, a Master of Science degree in Aeronautical and Astronautical Engineering from Stanford University, and an MBA from Regis University. President of the Hubert L, "Hooks" Jones chapter of the Tuskegee Airmen Incorporated, he also serves with a nonprofit dedicated to opening aviation opportunities for injured vets, and is a life member of the Air Force Association. He is also a member of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics (AIAA) and a former member of the AIAA Flight Test Technical Committee.

Mark is currently on the Adjunct Faculty of Colorado Technical University, where he teaches physics. In his spare time, he is a flight instructor and tow pilot with his soaring club, a member of the men's leadership team at his church, and has recently published his second book "WARNING: This Book May Get You Killed," a study of heroism by everyday people. He is married to the former Phyllis Dubose of Sacramento, California.
