Tom Nelson provided information from Lynn Severson: Lynn said she has renal cell carcinoma in her left kidney with no renal vein invasion, so the cancer is likely only inside the kidney. She is going to have surgery Wednesday, June 27th at Penrose Main. Her son will be with her.

Tom also distributed a card in memory of Bill Cook, and had some pictures. Bill was a longtime Monument Hill Sertoman and Kiwanian. He was the recipient of the Sertoman of the Year.

Glenn Scott suffered a fall in his driveway resulting in a cracked jaw, four broken ribs and a cracked metacarpal. RF Smith said he looks like he has been in a brawl, but after a couple days in the hospital he is back home with family providing support. A get well card was distributed.

A family service was held on Friday following the passing of Chuck Dunham on Sunday 10 June 2018. Chuck passed peacefully with his family by his side. Ed Tomlinson distributed a card in his memory.

Randy Vernon said his wife's father passed away on Friday night, and they will be going to Missouri. Randy asked for our prayers.

Ed Tomlinson provided the invocation. We are mindful of Kiwanis members that are dealing with difficult times with the loss of a Kiwanis member and those that are dealing with health issues. We pray for comfort and healing for those in need, and for those that are protecting us from wildfires in the state.

Dean Snow led the Pledge of Allegiance.

President Barb Broshous

Barb called the meeting to order at 8:00 am. Barb's thought of the day: "The hardest arithmetic to master is that which enables us to count our blessings."

HAPPY BUCKS

Bill Frier was happy for the value of history. This is a value that receives a lot of attention at West Point as shown in the Bugle Notes, a small tome for cadets. From this book, Bill quoted "Grip hands, grip hands though it be from the shadows." Bill said this quote recognizes the value of the people that have gone before us and the good lessons they have taught. Bill had two examples: the first in General MacArthur for his governance of Japan following WWII, and second in today's Secretary of State, Mike Pompeo.

Pat Losey was happy because June 16th is her and Jerry's anniversary. Congratulations!

Jack Fry had two happy bucks. One for finishing and surviving 36 holes of golf on Thursday. The second for beating his son - Jack started the second 18 holes birdy, par, par and his son never got above water after that...

The 167th day of the year; 167 is the only prime requiring exactly eight cubes to express it.

USOC-COLORADO SPRINGS HISTORY:

1976- Based on directives from the President's Commission on Olympic Sports named by President Gerald Ford in the aftermath of problems for athletes at the Montreal Games and an ongoing squabble between the NCAA and the AAU related to selection and rights to compete, the USOC sought to relocate from 57 Park Avenue in New York City to establish Olympic training centers and a new national headquarters.

1977- USOC Selected Colorado Springs for national headquarters and established Olympic Training Center at old ENT AFB facility with 35 acres. (The first training center was opened in Squaw Valley, Cal., in early 1977). Olympic legend Bob Mathias was hired to run the Colorado Springs OTC, which welcomed its first athletes in August. The El Pomar Foundation gave the USOC a check for $1 million to seal the deal and the move of Olympic House to the city.

1997- USOC opened new, state-of-the-art facilities in the Colorado Springs complex, including athlete housing, dining hall, fieldhouse, aquatics center and visitor center, sports medicine center with $23.8 capital construction effort. Some 8,000 athletes now use the facility annually.

2006- More than 400,000 athletes have used the training facilities in Colorado Springs, which is also home of 21 National Governing Bodies of Olympic Sports, and 54 national or international sports organizations. The Colorado Springs was named a USOC Community Partner city after raising $250,000 from various sources to support USOC training for elite Olympic and Paralympic athletes.

All of this translates into about $215 million a year in economic impact in Colorado Springs, according to a USOC study commissioned in 2010. That year, the Olympic Committee and its related organizations and businesses employed more than 2,100 people here. The tally included 27 national sports governing bodies now located in Colorado Springs, as well, but not several dozen other amateur sports groups in the area. Other outfits, from the Mountain West Conference to the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency, are now headquartered in Colorado Springs, too. Each year, about 13,000 athletes and sports staff travel to the city's Olympic Training Center, and a good 125,000 of the rest of us come, too, just to get a peek at what they're doing.

In the 1970s, the USOC was embroiled in a power grab with the NCAA and the Amateur Athletic Union over who would govern the status of amateur athletes in America and lead them into international competition. As the three feuded over jurisdiction, athletes caught in the middle never got the chance to compete in the Olympics. The 1976 Summer Games in Montreal proved a particular embarrassment for the USOC, which

Training Facilities:

The USOC operates Olympic Training Centers at which aspiring Olympians prepare for international competition:

The main facility in Colorado Springs offers both summer and winter sports training in a variety of sports. It houses the USOC headquarters and many permanent athletic venues.

The ARCO Training Center in Chula Vista, California offers training in various summer sports. The largest facility there is a lake for canoeing and rowing.

The U.S. Olympic Center in Lake Placid, New York is a facility for winter sports athletes. Permanent facilities include an ice hockey/figure skating arena, a bobsled run, and a luge run.

Although catered toward elite athlete training, these complexes are also open to the public and offer a variety of services, including tours and regular camps and competitions for various domestic and international sport programs.

Additionally, the USOC partners with 16 elite training sites across the country, to provide U.S. athletes with Olympic-caliber facilities that positively impact performance. Facilities with U.S. Olympic training site designation have invested millions of dollars in operating, staffing, equipment and training costs. These sites are often selected to host U.S. Olympic Team

Trials and support Team USA athletes to prepare for the Olympic Games.

In order to truly appreciate depth of the USOC facility, everyone is encouraged to visit this great facility. Thanks to Paul McNeil for this interesting presentation.
